Bruggman's Gambrel-roffed House
2390 Churchville Road
Churchville, MD 21014

This 1½ story, gambrel roof house is located on Churchville Road.
The house faces south and is three bays by two.

This house is thought to be quite old. Paul Beatty Harlan, the former owner, mentioned that family information concerning this house seems to indicate that the house is over two hundred years old.

The gambrel roof was a popular form and a very practical one. It afforded almost as much second floor space as a two story house, with neither the construction cost, nor perennial taxation as a two story house. The Federal Direct tax list of 1798 shows these houses classified as one story houses.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This 1½ story, gambrel roof house is located on Churchville Road. The house faces south and is three bays by two.

The owner of this house is very distrustful of the Maryland Historical Trust's and the Historic District Commission's motives and would not grant permission to survey the house. No interior information could be obtained; all exterior information was obtained from the road.

The gambrel roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Two dormers are located on the south side. Brick chimneys in the end walls rise to opposite corners of the roof, perhaps indicating corner fireplaces.

The house has its entrance in the center bay of the south and north sides. Windows are irregularly spaced and the sashes have been replaced.

Exterior walls have been stuccoed.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE (Include Personages, Dates, Events, Etc.)

The origins of this house are not known to the owner or the previous owner, Paul Harlan. Mr Harlan rented this place to a former soldier in the Franco Prussian war, and then the Bruggman, and then sold it to him about 50 years ago. The house has probably been preserved, under the stucco and the asphalt roofing, in spite of the ~~judgment~~ judgment of a former owner to alter its appearance forty years ago.

Its history is not known except that former owner, Mr Paul Beatty Harlan understands that the house is over two hundred years old. Archaeological study warranted.

Miss Breegan is very sensitive about the condition her house is in. She has little or no money to spend on it - she realizes that it is valued by historians because the original shouking and fireplaces and woodwork are intact, and she finds this attention very frustrating because she has neither time, taste, nor money to do anything herself and wouldn't know where to begin.

J. Wolkow tells me she has refused to let him see inside because it isn't neat enough, despite her protestations of interest only in the structure.

She will let me know whether I have her permission and her sister's to include the house in MHT's UR.
